

Transition State Complexation in the Design of Hydrocarbon Rearrangements

Dean J. Tantillo

University of California, Davis

Several transition metal promoted sigmatropic shifts were examined using modern quantum chemical methods. For each reaction, it was determined whether direct transition state complexation or, instead, transition metal intervention was the source of rate acceleration and stereoselection.

